

Bowman High School

College 2 Career Day 2011

On Saturday August 27 College of the Canyons held an amazing activity on campus for all Hart District students. The emphasis was on career exploration and finding out how COC could benefit high school students both academically as well as professionally down the road.

Former Bowman student Caitlin Morris was in charge of the "Teach" programs table. She told future students about all of the ways COC could help prepare them to become a teacher.

Current Bowman student Ken Bedford talked with her since he is interested in pursuing the profession. He said, "I was able to open my eyes to many occupations, including welding, which I might also be interested in as a career option."

Corey Stone, another current Bowman student, told Bowman's Work Experience teacher Mike Nugent, "there were a lot of long term career opportunities to explore, but for sure I won't become a scientist."

Both Ken and Corey enjoyed the morning interacting with the COC staff and faculty and came away better prepared to begin making plans for post Bowman education!
